ABSTRACT

Africa has laid its claim to the 21st century (be named) after its Continent- Africa's Century. True to this claim-game, Africa has ensured and distributed to several stake-holders its cooperative aptitude at the United Nations (UN).

The African agencies such as the African Development Bank, African Economic Research Consortium, Global Coalition for Africa, United Nations Economic Commission for Africa, and World Bank have drafted Africa's developmental prospectus supported by the idea of Africa's rise with domestic and foreign funds. Know by the way that Africa coined the phraseology of 'Global Village' that the World happens to be offering all sorts of dignified opportunities for Africa such as, for example, to leapfrog stages of snail-spaced technological-research-tracks in the run of globalization to its vantage point.

Verification and compilation of the African-century-claim with the help of several references traced and glanced at with a legal eye-view has enabled the present state, form and status of this Research Paper bearing the weight at the height of the Title of Africa in the 21st Century & Africa's 21st Century on the Same Page: Only Time Will Tell the Truth and/or for that matter of research of tell-all-tales, Only Time Will Tell Analytics keep Africa & World busier with smoothing truth.

2. INTRODUCTION

The future of Africa in the 21st century is a hotly debated issue: Africa and the Democratic Tradition, Africa and Political Stability, Good Governance and Development as Africa's Majors among academic scholars including economists, political scientists and sociologists all over the world (Dr. S.C. Saxena ,2001, p ii).

Robertson (2012) says that “Africa will rule the 21st Century and has economic, social and political development given the geo-economic structure of the world and poised to grow along at a faster pace, due to its advantages in possessing vast natural resources, huge tracts of cultivable land and a population structure in which productive youth will outnumber the elderly or the very young “.

In discussing the rise of Africa in the 21st century, Jacob Zuma (2015) being the President of South Africa himself writes that much has been said about the rise of Africa in the twenty-first century and as home to seven of the 10 fastest growing economies in the world, the continent has in the past few years received a slew of attention from investors, commentators, developers and philosophers alike.

The current President of South Africa, His Highness President Ramaphosa also has declared that this Century (21st century) is the century of Africa in 2019 when he was in India on India’s Republic Day Function on 26-1-2019 as the Chief Guest.

Over the past decade, the growth of the African continent has been, to put it modestly, remarkable. What is more, the advances being made in Africa are not limited solely to economic growth, but have been spread across the board. The current spike in education, standard of living, health, and governance is set to keep increasing over the next 30 years and beyond.

3. RESEARCH METHOD

Qualitative research is a process that is about inquiry. It helps create in-depth understanding of issues in their natural settings. This is a non-statistical method (Alexander and Dochy, 1995). Qualitative research is heavily dependent on the research experience to gather as much information as possible about an issue at hand in available Contents/Texts.

4. UPTODATE AFRICA AS ON DATE IN 21ST CENTURY

Even geo-politics is often dismissed as an illegitimate form of knowledge or an imperialist idea or an unscientific subject or a war-time propaganda or a psychological pressure but the triumph of modern African consumerism cannot be put down for the reason of popular consumption of Film-productions, Telescopes, Televisions, Night & Day Virgin Casinos, Internet Journals and Publications of modern economic and technological Researches have found their niche, influence and respect throughout the African nations. Africa too has Space Programs and nuclear weapons

5. THE AFRICA CENTURY-CLAIMANT'S ITEMIZATION

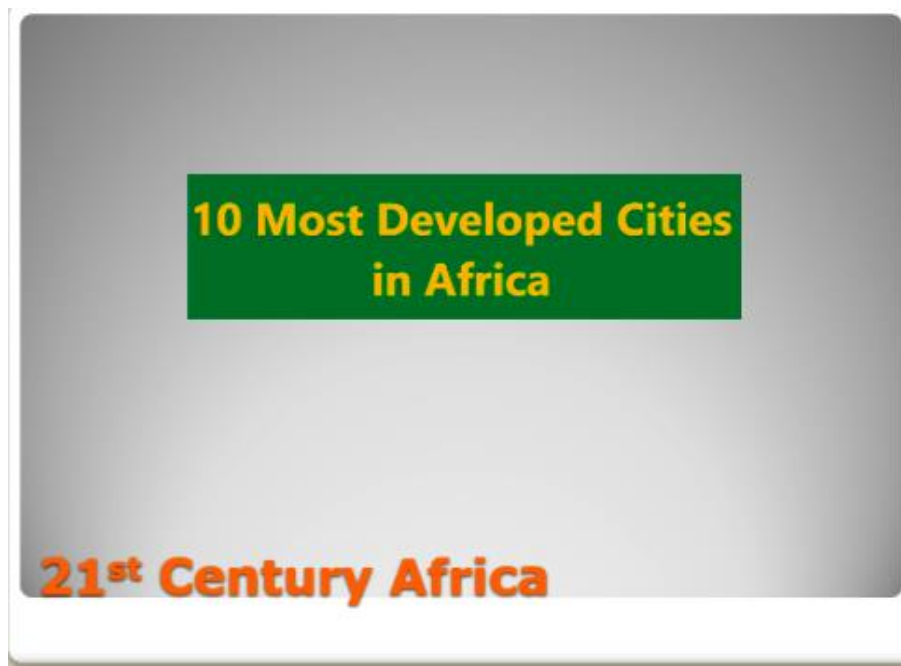

Africa has experienced moments of inspiring economic progress. As home to fastest growing economies in the world, the continent has in the past few years received a slew of attention from investors, commentators, developers and philosophers alike. Africa has made manifold News Headlines and Breaking News Flashes. With an abundant store of virtually every resource in the world (land, oceans, minerals, energy) and a population of over a billion people, the interest in Africa today is its scientific rise and from the economic perspective, Africa is now the second most attractive investment destination in the world. In Africa, the speed of change in almost every discipline of human effort is something to comprehend and in consonance with the hallmark of fame that Africa is the motherland of the human race. That's how, the traditional, focusing on value systems, social structures, economic activity and democratically affiliated formations of governance systems surface in this Endeavour. One can witness the existence of world satellite information system, the cultivation of cosmopolitan life-styles, the emergence of global sportsmen, the spread of world tourism and international military systems as the triumph of consumerism in Africa in the wake of rise of Africa on the global stage exhibiting progressive signals. Africa too has Space Programs and nuclear weapons.

8. CONCLUSION

Africa is considered an “emerging continent.” The Declaration reflects Africa's positive moment in the 21st century, promoting democratic, social, economic and technological improvements. Thus began the first phase of the phenomenon of Africa's rise, with the United Nations (UN) at the forefront of peace issues. Security, development, governance and human rights for Africa's inclusive and sustainable development in the 21st century. The Office of the Special Adviser on Africa (OSAA), on behalf of the United Nations, therefore suggested that the New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) would be a decisive boost. A clear achievement for Africa is setting a golden standard of African unity and evoking durable solutions to forced migration and statelessness around the world. This has even been praised by the United Nations. This is the same way Africans feel about the stages of development of economic prosperity and political stability, recognizing that stumbling does not mean falling, but moving forward faster, and that Africa resolves crises. demonstrating political power and social will. Africans are the most important part of her 21st century civilized world. They are also the quickest movers, with a universal mindset to reform, transform and achieve far and wide. However, the fact that Africans now occupy a prominent niche position is due to the 21st century itself.
